This document recommends three inspection methods. Method 1 mainly classifies inclusions according to their morphology. Method 2 mainly classifies inclusions according to their chemical composition. Method 1 and Method 2 are suitable for microscopic evaluation of non-metallic inclusions larger than 2μm in rolled or forged steel with a compression ratio greater than or equal to 3. Method 3 is used to determine the specific details of a certain type of inclusion such as volume fraction, number fraction and other stereological parameters. It is suitable for the statistical classification of inclusions of all sizes (including below 2μm) in various slabs or steel products.
