A Passion to Learn Sandra S. and Raymond D. Loewe, 2014-02

Instilling a passion to learn early in kids' lives can make a huge difference in their success and their enjoyment in life. And helping kids find that passion can create a vitality and sense of purpose that can enrich our own lives. Ray and Sandy share their personal stories of getting through their school years without finding a passion that made sense of their educational paths. Today, schools are less and less able to provide the experiential education that could spark kids' passion for learning. Budgets, curriculum mandates, time-consuming coursework, and testing all combine to make it more and more difficult for teachers to expose their students to experiences that could fire their ambition and create a passion for learning that could help them achieve their goals. The stories in this book provide a taste of what is possible. The book also challenges readers to consider their own ideas and find a way to get involved. Ray and Sandy offer a format for developing experiential-education projects so they are viable and self-sustaining. It's a win-win! Students develop a passion for learning and adults are rewarded with vitality and purpose that can carry them through their active pre- and post-retirement years.

Learning in the Age of Digital and Green Transition

Michael E. Auer, Wolfgang Pachatz, Tiia Rüütman, 2023-03-21

We are currently witnessing a significant transformation in the development of education on all levels and especially in post-secondary education. To face these challenges, higher education must find innovative ways to quickly respond to these new needs. These were the aims connected with the 25th International Conference on Interactive Collaborative Learning (ICL2022), which was held in Vienna, Austria, from September 27 to 30, 2022. Since its beginning in 1998, this conference is devoted to new approaches in learning with a focus on collaborative learning in higher education. This book contains papers in the fields of: •

Collaborative Learning• Digital Transition in Education• Technology Enhanced Learning• Advances in Machine and Technology Enhanced Learning• Educational Virtual Environments• Flipped Classrooms• Games in Engineering Education• Entrepreneurship in Engineering Education
Interested readership includes policymakers, academics, educators, researchers in pedagogy and learning theory, school teachers, the learning industry, further and continuing education lecturers, etc.

What Are We Going to Learn Today? Anne Cummings Jacopetti, 2016-11-29 Anne Cummings Jacopetti's engaging book, based on five decades of teaching experience, is a clarion call for parents, teachers, and everyone concerned about the future and the way we educate our children. What are the necessary conditions for full development of our most precious natural resource-our children's innate capacities? Jacopetti answers this question. She stresses that all children are born learners whose survival depends on their ability to make sense of the world. Every child wants to succeed. Using the words of her students and her vivid memories of them, she describes the natural ways that children learn best. Jacopetti demonstrates that our current high-stakes-testing system limits development of capacities such as empathy, curiosity, creativity, collaborative inquiry, patience, perseverance and self-confidence, damaging not only our children but also our prospects for a more just and sustainable future. Jacopetti offers practical and wise guidance for parents, teachers and administrators who want to support children to become enthusiastic lifelong learners, world citizens who see the earth as a miracle to be preserved rather than functionaries in a corporately-controlled world that sees the living earth as a resource to be exploited for gain. Children learn best from teachers they trust, and they learn most effectively through play-creating safe situations in which they can test their ideas and try out their new capacities. Children are capable of developing supportive communities in which each child is respected for his or her special gifts. Intellectual capacities as well as soul life are deepened by practicing the arts, by hearing stories and by participating in community and exploring the natural world. Children learn by asking questions and by learning how to pursue answers; they learn by doing and by being allowed to learn from their mistakes. Jacopetti warns us that when we ignore these fundamentals in the service of teaching to the test or when we cut recess to make room for more math or science worksheets, we are not paying attention to what children need to thrive and to become engaged, successful citizens. What Are We Going to Learn Today? reminds us of some basic truths about learning and offers inspiration and practical support for teachers and parents who want their children to thrive and become enthusiastic lifelong learners.

Embracing the Melody of Phrase: An Emotional Symphony within Learnwords Windows

In some sort of taken by displays and the ceaseless chatter of quick interaction, the melodic splendor and psychological symphony created by the written word often fade into the back ground, eclipsed by the relentless sound and disturbances that permeate our lives. However, situated within the pages of Learnwords Windows an enchanting fictional value overflowing with fresh feelings, lies an immersive symphony waiting to be embraced. Constructed by a wonderful musician of language, this charming masterpiece conducts readers on a psychological trip, well unraveling the hidden songs and profound impact resonating within each cautiously constructed phrase. Within the depths with this poignant assessment, we can discover the book is main harmonies, analyze their enthralling publishing fashion, and surrender ourselves to the profound resonance that echoes in the depths of readers souls.
