U. S. Marine Specific Software Interoperability Requirements of the AFATDS and IOS Software Suites Geoffrey D.

Thome, 2002-09-01 The Marine Corps has several Tactical Combat Systems at the Infantry Division level and below, The Information-Operations Server Version 1 (IOS v, 1) is a command and control (C2) system with a client-server architecture that when networked offers the Common Operational Picture (COP), The client is called Command and Control Personal Computer (C2PC), 105 was designed primarily to support maneuver, and has its roots in the Navy's Joint Maritime Command Information System (JMCIS), C2PC has been fielded to all Battalion and Squadron level and higher units in the Marine Corps, while IOS resides in Regimental and higher units, The Advanced Field Artillery Tactical Data System (AFATDS), originally designed by the Army, is the Marine fire support C2 System of Record, Current AFATDS software is tightly coupled to a particular hardware platform AFATDS is currently being fielded to all units in the Fleet Marine forces, There are several problem with having two stand-alone C2 systems inside the same Combat Operations Center (COC), Among the most pressing problems is the inability for fires to support maneuver without tedious and dangerous manual conversion of data between systems This thesis explores the software requirements for tactical systems integration of AFATDS and IOS.

Dictionary of Global Climate Change W.J.

Maunder, 2012-12-06 Climate, climate change, climate fluctuations and climatic trends are only a few of the terms used today, in not only conferences, scientific symposia and workshops, but also parliaments and in discussions throughout society. To climatologists these terms may be well known; to the vast majority of people, however, they are new, and they require definition and explanation. The World Meteorological Organization (WMO) inherited an interest and involvement in the studies of climate and climate change from its predecessor, the International Meteorological Organization (IMo), which was established in 1873. By 1929 the IMO had set up a Commission for Climatology to deal with matters related to climate studies. When, in 1950, the World Meteorological Organization assumed the mantle of the IMO, it retained the commission which, among other responsibilities, had already recognized the need for the definition and explanation of terms used in climatology. It must also be said that much of what we now know about climate derives from the scientific and technical programmes coordinated by IMO and now, to a much greater extent, by WMO. In 1979, the First World Climate Conference made an assessment of the status of knowledge of climate and climate variability, and recommended the establishment of a World Climate Programme. This recommendation was fully endorsed by the Eighth World Meteorological Congress, and the World Climate Programme was subsequently established by WMO in co-operation with the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU) and the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP).
