Oscar Tuazon Anna Brohm, Philipp Kaiser, Miwon Kwon, Antek Walczak, 2014 Oscar Tuazon's work comprises large scale installations and sculptures, usually combines natural and industrial materials. Tinted by do-it-yourself etho, minimalist aesthetic, and vernacular architecture, his art maintains a precarious quality that questions the limits of objects and architecture, to redefine the physical experience of a building or a space. 'Live', volume 1, concentrates on a major exhibition of new sculptural works at Museum Ludwig called 'Alone in an empty room'. A full-scale reproduction of fragments of the artist's house in Los Angeles grafted onto the architecture of the Ludwig museum, the exhibition collapses two spaces together, producing a strange third space. 'Live', volume 2, comprises a photographic monograph of selected works covering the artist's unconventional production over the past five years. Combining documentation of significant individual works, exhibitions, and large-scale installations with the artist's own production documentation of works in the studio, the book is a unique look at works in progress.

The Picture of Dorian Gray by Oscar the New Annotated Edition Oscar Wilde, 2020-05-02 Just a few years later, the book and the aesthetic/moral dilemma it presented became issues in the trials occasioned by Wilde's homosexual liaisons, which resulted in his imprisonment. Of Dorian Gray's relationship to autobiography, Wilde noted in a letter, Basil Hallward is what I think I am: Lord Henry what the world thinks me: Dorian what I would like to be--in other ages, perhaps.

Ex Machina Alex Garland, 2015 A young programmer is selected to participate in a breakthrough experiment in artificial intelligence by evaluating the human qualities of a breathtaking female A.I.

The Aesthetics of Self-invention Shelton Waldrep, 2004 By printing the title Professor of Aesthetics on his visiting cards, Oscar Wilde announced yet another transformation--and perhaps the most significant of his career, proclaiming his belief that he could redesign not just his image but his very self. Shelton Waldrep explores the cultural influences at play in Wilde's life and work and his influence on the writing and performance of the twentieth century, particularly on the lives and careers of some of its most aestheticized performers: Truman Capote, Andy Warhol, David Hockney, and David Bowie. As Waldrep reveals, Wilde's fusing of art with commerce foresaw the coming century's cultural producers who would blend works of both high art and mass-market appeal. Whether as a gay man or as a postmodern performance artist ahead of his time, Wilde ultimately emerges here as the embodiment of the twentieth-century media-savvy artist who is both subject and object of the aesthetic and economic systems in which he is enmeshed. Shelton Waldrep is associate professor of English at the University of Southern Maine. He is the coauthor of Inside the Mouse: Work and Play at Disney World (1995) and editor of The Seventies: The Age of Glitter in Popular Culture (2000).

A Face Without a Heart Rick R. Reed, 2000

11:11 a Love Story Oscar Nelson, 2018-06-21 What made him stop was something he would ask himself for a very long time. But halfway across the driveway between some buildings, he felt like pausing and taking in the crisp night air. After the loud whisper of the letting go of a deep breath, he glanced towards a yellow light in the alley, the silence between his breaths letting him hear where the scream had come from. He heard something rustling. Pulling his eyes down from the yellow arc of light, he saw a wave of jet-black hair and a large figure seemingly engaged in an erratic dance. Their eyes met across the dimness, it felt as if something pulled out from him to her. Like the exhalation of the breath he just took. It seemed to lead him. Stu stared at her, Angel. He felt recognition in her distant eyes. His weight shifting back and away as something in him moved forward. Time slowed into separate moments as step by step he felt like he was going backward from where he wanted to be as he moved forward to the source of her flashing eyes.
