Screen Saver Noel McKeehan, 2009-11 Some fairly serious shit has happened in the last sixty years. As fate would have it, I was fairly close to the central point of a lot of that shit - albeit in some cases only briefly; shit it seems, has a fairly long half life. As time has passed I have found it increasingly difficult - impossible really - to turn off a continued remembrance of the events and places and people that inhabited the story boards of all of that shit. They just won't leave me alone. So I have written it, and them, all down. One bookend of the story was my involvement in the war effort, as we called the Vietnam debacle. The other was the near demise of IBM. Between those bookends there lurk a wide variety of people, experiences and events that always seemed, as they occurred, to be coherently additive to the total story.

My hope is that women will gain self-worth and clarity in their relationships. My journey started from meeting a man with a beautiful heart. We hailed from two very different family backgrounds; we were raised very differently. However, he eventually won my heart through my six-year-old daughter. He also won the hearts of my mother and siblings in London, England. After thirteen years of marriage, the true man I married emerged. Was this marriage and lovely home we lived in worth me living a miserable life? I then realized that a screen saver created a blurry vision in many instances. There were signs of mistrust between my ex and his friends and business partners. I ignored all the signs. Let's take a moment to think about the meaning of the words we recite in our wedding vows. What a commitment we make in that moment before God and witnesses! The vows become empty words of tradition when you marry a con man like I did.
