Activated Sludge Wesley Eckenfelder,Jack Musterman,1998-03-11 In the past, industrial wastewater treatment primarily focused on the removal of BOD and suspended solids. In recent years, however, the focus has changed to aquatic toxicity, priority pollutants, and volatile organics. This required changes in how we design and operate biological treatment plants. Many existing plants must be retrofitted. New approaches to meet new requirements are discussed in detail. The authors, with a combined experience of sixty years, have presented case studies for a wide variety of industrial wastewaters including pulp and paper, food processing, chemical and pharmaceuticals, and textile wastewaters. Data interpretation and process design are developed through the use of seventeen examples. Procedures for the laboratory and pilot plant generation of process design data are presented. Emphasis is placed on meeting the many new regulations governing industrial wastewater discharges.

Some Characteristics of Automotive Gasolines and Their Performance in a Light Aircraft Engine K. M. Morrison, 1984 The primary purpose of this extensive test effort was to observe real-time operational performance characteristics associated with automotive grade fuel utilized by piston engine powered light general aviation aircraft. In fulfillment of this effort, baseline engine operations were established with 100LL aviation grade fuel followed by four blends of automotive grade fuel. A comprehensive - sea - level - static test cell/flight test data collection and evaluation effort was conducted to review operational characteristics of a carbureted light aircraft piston engine as related to fuel volatility, fuel temperature, and fuel system pressure. Sea - level - static test cell engines operations were conducted utilizing an AVCO Lycoming O-320 engine connected to an eddy current dynamometer which facilitated data collection under various engine load conditions. In addition, real-time inflight performance data was obtained utilizing a Cessna 150/Continental O-200A engine, while operating on test fuels No. 1 and No. 2 which had Reid vapor pressures of 14.4 psi and 8.0 psi, respectively. Originator furnished key words include: General Aviation, Automotive Fuel, Aviation Fuel, Vapor lock, Vapor-Liquid Ratio, Fuel Additives, Light Aircraft, Piston Engines, and Fuel Volatility.
