Shades and Shadows and Perspective O. E. Randall,2015-06-26 Excerpt from Shades and Shadows and Perspective: A Text-Book Based on the Principles of Descriptive Geometry The aim of this treatise is to present, through a knowledge of descriptive geometry, those principles which are fundamental in the solution of both theoretical and practical problems and, by a formulation of these principles, to arrive at and thus place upon a mathematical basis those rules and formulas which are commonly used in practice. The method of presentation, which has been developed and tested during fifteen years of experience in the class room, seeks to introduce and substantiate each principle by reference to the simplest form of magnitude. For this reason no attempt has been made at either elaborate or artistic drawings, as these belong rather to the field of application. In the establishment of principles great effort is made to be explicit; but in the application of these principles the work is assigned in such a way as to call out the student's originality and demand of him work similar to that required in practice. A feature of the book is a method of locating given parts, by which the work of the drawing and recitation room may be easily and definitely assigned. This reduces the labor of the instructor, makes it possible to assign special lay-outs for problems, and gives the student excellent practice in accuracy of measurement. Shades and Shadows David C. Lange, 2015-09-13 Here is a meritorious little work setting forth in clear fashion the principles of descriptive geometry and of shades and shadows. The author has followed consistently his prefatory announcement of due consideration to the engineering point of view. The information contained herein was compiled with special attention for its use as a text book on shades and shadows. Architectural students in many colleges receive their early training under engineering teachers. An attempt was therefore made to serve such students, by assuming the point of view of their engineering training at the beginning of the book, and lead them by a study of shades and shadows toward an appreciation of the artistic architectural point of view, so seldom developed in a strictly engineering course. The illustrations are very numerous and adequately present the methods of descriptive geometry and shades and shadows. A number of very pleasing architectural drawings-some of them the work of students-illustrate the applications of the methods and lend attractiveness and interest to the work. Numerous problems are given at the ends of the various sections. The final section treats briefly of wash rendering-a subject on which there is the following interesting comment in the forepart of the book: They often resort instead to mere copying, to the use of shades and shadows merely guessed at, and to a lavish rendering to cover mistakes. The beauty and impressiveness of a drawing is more truthfully enhanced by the accurate casting of its shadows than by its rendering. -Engineering and Contracting, Vol. 55 [1921]
