Evaluation of the Probability Integral to High Precision Francis Dominic Murnaghan,1965
The 'converging factor' for an asymptotic series representing a function $f(x)$ is that number by which the $(n + 1)$ term of the series must be multiplied so that the result of adding this product to the sum of the first n terms will be $f(x)$. The determination to high precision of this factor for the asymptotic series representing the probability integral is described. Tables of this factor to 63 decimal places are included for n ranging from 2 to 64. (Author).
