Newtown Alive Rosalyn Howard Ph D, 2017-03-15 This book chronicles the history of Sarasota, Florida's African American community - Newtown - that celebrated its 100-year anniversary in 2014. It answers questions about many aspects of community life: why the earliest African Americans who came to Sarasota, then a tiny fishing village, first settled in areas near downtown called -Black Bottom- and -over town;- their transition from there to Newtown; how they developed Newtown from swampland into a self-contained community to ensure their own survival during the Jim Crow era; the ways they earned a living, what self-help organizations they formed; their religious and educational traditions; residents' military service, the strong emphasis placed on education; how they succeeded in gaining political representation after filing a federal lawsuit; and much more. Newtown residents fought for civil rights, endured and triumphed over Jim Crow segregation, suffered KKK intimidation and violence, and currently are resisting the stealthy gentrification of their community. Whether you are new to the area, a frequent visitor, an educator, historian or a longtime resident trying to connect the dots in your family tree, you will find these stories of courage, dignity and determination enlightening and empowering!

Recollection and Reconnection Rosalyn Howard Ph D, 2015-06-05 This is one of few publications focusing on the people of St. David's Island - a community in Bermuda that developed a unique and little known culture. In this book, the St. David's Islanders reveal previously unrecorded personal stories about their mixed ethnic heritage, what it was like growing up on a self-described idyllic and isolated island, and about their recent reconnection with long lost Native American relatives from the USA. The St. David's Islanders were a mystery to many other Bermudians for a number of reasons: their geographic isolation; strong sense of community and distrust of outsiders; dietary habits, eating 'strange' foods; speaking with a 'funny' accent; and their physical appearance that was very different from most other Bermudians. They were often taunted by outsiders and called Mohawks because of their mixed ancestry that includes Native Americans, Africans, and Europeans. St. David's Islanders recollect their stories in interviews with the author, a cultural anthropologist. They reveal how an important part of their oral history that was silenced for generations has become a vocal and passionate part of their existence over the past two decades. That passion is the search for details about their Native American heritage, which they are seeking to accomplish by reconnecting with their long lost relatives, and conducting research in the archives and other repositories for documents that might shed light on their ancestry. The St. David's Islanders and other Bermudians with Native American ancestry formed an organization to plan a Reconnection event that would celebrate their Native American ancestry and re-establish a bond with their relatives from various North American tribal nations including: the Mashantucket Pequot, Narragansett, Mashpee Wampanoag, Cherokee, Nipmuc, and others. In 2002, the first Reconnection Festival and Powwow was held on St. David's Island. Since their Reconnection, they have discovered remarkable similarities in some of their cultural practices, maritime skills, and physical resemblances. In Recollection and Reconnection, you will hear the voices of the St. David's Islanders, their North American Native relatives, and Bermudian government officials. In addition to the interviews, there are many photographs of the interviewees and of participants in the Bermuda and US Powwows.
