Perspectives on Innovation Franco Malerba, Stefano Brusoni, 2007-03-29 Case studies, empirical models, appreciative analyses and formal theories abound.

Innovation and the Growth of Cities Zoltán J. Ács, 2002 Ács (business, U. of Baltimore), mixing concerns of Schumpeterian economics with issues of geography, argues that the driving motor of regional and economic growth is industrial innovation. He searches through the patent statistics of the United States searching for evidence of the shifts of knowledge bases between urban areas and compares the shifts with shifts in growth. Among the important facets of this process are the spillover of knowledge from universities to industry and the rate of new product innovation within industry. The empirical material is then used to point the way towards an economic model that combines Krugman's theory of initial conditions for spatial concentration of economic activities with the Romerian theory of endogenous economic growth. Plant Evolution and the Origin of Crop Species James F. Hancock, 2012 The genetic variability that developed in plants during their evolution is the basis of their domestication and breeding into the crops grown today for food, fuel and other industrial uses. This third edition of Plant Evolution and the Origin of Crop Species brings the subject up-to-date, with more emphasis on crop origins. Beginning with a description of the processes of evolution in native and cultivated plants, the book reviews the origins of crop domestication and their subsequent development over time. All major crop species are discussed, including cereals, protein plants, starch crops, fruits and vegetables, from their origins to conservation of their genetic resources for future development.

Challenge Social Innovation Hans-Werner Franz, Josef Hochgerner, Jürgen Howaldt, 2012-12-13 In recent years, social innovation has experienced a steep career. Numerous national governments and large organisations like the OECD, the European Commission and UNESCO have adopted the term. Social innovation basically means that people adopt new social practices in order to meet social needs in a different or more effective way. Prominent examples of the past are the Red Cross and the social welfare state or, at present, the internet 2.0 transforming our communication and cooperation schemes, requiring new management concepts, even empowering social revolutions. The traditional concept of innovation as successful new technological products needs fundamental rethinking in a society marked by knowledge and services, leading to a new and enriched paradigm of innovation. There is multiple evidence that social innovation will become of growing importance not only concerning social integration, equal opportunities and dealing with the greenhouse effects but also with regard to preserving and expanding the innovative capacity of companies and societies. While political authorities stress the social facets of social innovation, this book also encompasses its societal and systemic dimensions, collecting the scientific expertise of renowned experts and scholars from all over the world. Based on the contributions of the first world-wide science convention on social innovation from September 2011 in Vienna, the book provides an overview of scientific approaches to this still relatively new field. Forewords by Agnès HUBERT (Member of the Bureau of European Policy Advisers (BEPA) of the European Commission) and Antonella Noya (Senior Policy Analyst at OECD, manager of the OECD LEED Forum on Social Innovations)

Succeeding with New Materials: a Comprehensive Guide for Assessing Market Potential Elicia Maine, M. F. Ashby, 2002-12 New materials offer exciting potential for innovation and business success. But with more than 50,000 materials available already, how can you be sure that your development is

Assessing the risks involved and establishing the project's viability is therefore of paramount importance. This workbook outlines a strategy for increasing the knowledge-base on which investment decisions are taken, and for guiding the research, development and commercialisation required to launch a new material successfully.
