Quotations with an Attitude Roy L. Stewart,2005-08-28 People think that I must be a very strange person. This is not correct. I have the heart of a small boy. It is in a glass jar on my desk. Talk about attitude! That's Stephen King speaking, and he's just one of many who have something thoroughly entertaining to say. Forget social commentary, ethical statements, words of wisdom, or any other high falutin' oratory; these quotations have a kick, with bizarre thoughts, obscure observations, and fiendishly funny reflections. You'll laugh, sometimes in spite of yourself. And there's an incredibly diverse assortment of famous people weighing in, from the past and the present: Mark Twain, Jerry Seinfeld, Joan Rivers, Casey Stengel, Gloria Steinem, and Albert Einstein, to name a few.

Quote Unquote (A Handbook of Quotations) M.P. Singh,2005

Attitudes Bert Baberp,2013-09-10 Hi, I'm Bert Babero. I'm, what you might call, an observer of people. This is the audio-video version of my book, Attitudes; a collection of poetic essays intended to address the question: What makes people tick? It deals with Attitudes, some of which are mine, and some of which are not. The book is not intended to express a solitary theme or to promote a singular message. Rather, you should find it relatively eclectic. . . , as, perhaps, am I. After all, I'm a Muslim, by religion, African, by ethnicity, and American, by citizenship- having been raised in Africa, Arabia, and the USA. I'm an advocate of Affirmative Action and stem-cell research, reparations for racial injustice and Palestinian sovereignty; trained as a lawyer and a boxer. I embrace the Republican party and the Nation of Islam, have joined the NAACP and the National Rifle Association; enjoy Andrea Boucelli, hate Ebonics, love boating and, am indifferent to basketball. In other words, if it's stereotypes you're looking for, look elsewhere. Now, poetry, I concede, is not for everyone. . . neither, in fact, is literature period, come to think of it. But for those of us, who appreciate art in language, poetry rocks. Of course, there is another possibility; you may like poetry. . . , just not my poetry. And, that's OK, because if my style is not the same as yours, don't worry, that makes us even; but, if it is the same, take heart. . . , that makes you exceptional. So, laugh, if you will; think, if you can; or cry, if you must. Just sit back, relax, appreciate and, hopefully. . . , enjoy. Best Wishes, Bert Quotations as Pictures Josef Stern, 2022-02-15 The proposal of a semantics for quotations using explanatory notions drawn from philosophical theories of pictures. In Quotations as Pictures, Josef Stern develops a semantics for quotations using explanatory notions drawn from philosophical theories of pictures. He offers the first sustained analysis of the practice of quotation proper, as opposed to mentioning. Unlike other accounts that treat quotation as mentioning, Quotations as Pictures argues that the two practices have independent histories, that they behave differently semantically, that the inverted commas employed in both mentioning and quotation are homonymous, that so-called mixed quotation is nothing but subsentential quotation, and that the major problem of quotation is to explain its dual reference or meaning—its ordinary meaning and its metalinguistic reference to the quoted phrase attributed to the quoted subject. Stern argues that the key to understanding quotation is the idea that quotations are pictures or have a pictorial character. As a phenomenon where linguistic competence meets a nonlinguistic symbolic ability, the pictorial, quotation is a combination of features drawn from the two different symbol systems of language and pictures, which explains the exceptional and sometimes idiosyncratic data about quotation. In light of this analysis of verbal quotation, in the last chapters Stern analyzes scare quotation as a nonliteral expressive use of the inverted commas and explores the possibility of quotation in pictures themselves.
