Poetry illustrates the intangible feelings we have attached to these seasons, almost personifying them into something more. This collection features photos and poems created by Little Alice that stir up our love for the changing seasons.

Autumn Jean Mulatier,2004 A stunning tribute to the majesty of autumn foliage around the world. From Japan to Connecticut to Ontario, from the amazing intricacy of a single leaf to the abstract splendor of birch trees reflected in a mountain lake, these photographs capture the cycles of nature, the mystery of transformation, and the beauty of the living world. Accompanied by an international selection of literary quotations on the themes of autumn, nature, and beauty, this volume transcends geography and individual cultures to showcase nature's most glorious season. When world-famous caricaturist Jean Mulatier made a trip to New England in the fall of 1976, he was so awestruck by the beauty of the fall foliage he realized he had found a lifelong passion. Every autumn thereafter he continued his pilgrimage, traveling the globe to shoot the jewel-like imagery that is presented here for the very first time in this incomparable collection.

Michigan Colors Lester Hills,2021-07-06 The photographs featured in this compact volume are all prime examples of the fabulous color schemes enjoyed every autumn in the Great Lakes State. Throughout this scenic wonderland, there are various types of hardwood trees that produce vibrant colors offering decorative panels of orange, yellow, and red. These intense colors make for very memorable fall scenes! While New England may boast of great fall colors as well, Michigan offers its own wonderful color scenes just as intense as Vermont or New Hampshire or any points east! Michigan has immense stands of deciduous forests that display beautiful, radiant foliage, especially among the maples in the region. The photos in this book represent just a small portion of what Michigan has to offer every fall season. The author has selected the best pictures from a fall color tour from 2020. Thus, only certain areas are featured in this collection of autumn scenes. But what is found herein will be representative of what can commonly be found in October around the Lower Peninsula. Mr. Hills is a native of southern Michigan and has offered photos of scenes in areas he recalls from his youth. The colorful fall photos he offers here are gorgeous examples of what both locals and tourists alike will find in Michigan every fall.

The Seeker's Project Autumn Lyn,2020-05 This is an art photography book. It's a collection of photos and wisdoms from everyone of every background and pursuit. I don't have the slightest clue about the impact of everyone's sharing - how one might light a fire in another person's heart, unblock a path, encourage a possibility, or find peace even in the space of loss and confusion. This is especially true during these dark and challenging days with Covid19. I don't know why I do what I do - why a magnifying glass, why the eye, why people - your explanation is as good as mine. But I do know what I learned from this journey and the people who have contributed to me and this project: No matter who we are, where we are, how educated or wealthy we are, we all want the same things. We all want the basic necessities that make us alive and happy. We all want to be connected and gotten. We all want peace and love.

Color Cavalcade Lester Hills,2021-06-16 The collection of photographs in this book offer a variety of colorful scenes in various locations throughout Central Oregon. The author has assembled a line-up of appealing autumn color photos that are sure to be pleasing to the eyes of those who examine these pages. Despite the prominence of the desert in this region, there are splotches of fall color to be found all over this scenic area. This is especially true in those forested sectors close to the mountains where maples, aspens, and birch grow in prolific numbers by creeks and rivers. But due to human efforts, there are many deciduous trees in the communities of this part of the Beaver State. Though not every town in Central Oregon is represented herein, many of the pictures showcased are of scenes found in urban parks and along city streets. The purpose of this color-saturated volume is to show off the fall colors that abound in this sector of Oregon. Since the autumn colors are the primary feature of this book, it focuses on those areas with the most abundant color to be seen each fall. Granted, this area does not have the type of fall color scenes found in New England and other places that have massive deciduous forests. But that does not mean Central Oregon is void of autumn colors. On the contrary, this book displays the color-studded scenes that come along each year during the fall months, scenes relished by tourists and locals alike.

A New England Autumn, 2010-08-24 This magnificent collection of photographs offers a journey through the back roads and hidden corners of Americas most idyllic and beloved region. Each scene, suffused with color and light, brings a moment of private discovery and awakens a sense of home.

Autumn in the Hills Kevin L. Moss, 2010-01-12 October is the most stunning month of the year in Michigan. Fall color is a 3 to 4 week season that begins with subtle color changes to brilliant hues of red, gold, green and yellow. Photographer Kevin L. Moss captured this beauty just by photographing local nature preserves, municipal parks and his own backyard in October, 2009. What resulted is Kevin's best autumn color photographs yet to-date after photographing fall color every year for the past 20 years.
