Closing Distance Jim Oliver,1997 Pete Flowers is a single gay man living a well-ordered life. Then his mother announces that she has cancer. Between reconciling the emotional gaps in the family and seeking his own inner peace, Pete begins to rectify the cost of remaining silent in the face of time's passing. A witty, poignant tale about one man's struggle to redefine his life and face his fears.

someone, Deborah said. And who would that be? I asked. Me, she said. I want you to find me. The distinction between right and wrong is embedded deep in Bristol private eye Jack Shepherd. He has paid a high price getting to this point, negotiating a perilous path among his clients, the law and those on the wrong side of it. Deborah Thorne employs Shepherd to find her and promptly disappears. Who is she hiding from? Not only the man she has just hired, clearly. Then a body surfaces in the mud of the Severn Estuary and is identified as Deborah's therapist and a former client of Shepherd. Suddenly the search takes a much darker turn, sucking him into a sinister and brutal vortex which might see him pay the biggest price of all.
