From a Desk on Craigslist Joe Usseglio,2019-04-24 Things have a habit of piling up, of beaching themselves in the little coves that form over time in any household run by normal people. From the condition of my home and office, I must be more normal than practically anybody. This little book contains what I could salvage from manuscript pages that have in some cases aged past yellow to beige. No novels were harmed in the production of this book: these are all short or shortish stories, some so stunted in stature as to mimic poems. The styles vary, being influenced by the works of whichever writer I most envied at the time. The overall mood seems to be caustic/gloomy. That's odd, because I'm a pretty sociable, upbeat person, a fact to which all my friends would surely attest if I had any.

The Craigslist Incident Jason Fisk,2022-06-15 In The Craigslist Incident, Edna Barrett takes an advertisement out on Craigslist: I'm an 18-year-old female and I want to take a hit out on myself. Joe Dolsen, a 20-year-old who has suffered from periodic blackouts his whole life, answers the ad. What would bring two people to such ominous points at such young ages, and will they actually go through with it? Edna, raised by a single mother after the suicide of her father, repeatedly finds herself kicked out of schools for violent altercations that don't seem to be her fault. Finally, living a solitary life in rural Minnesota and taking classes online, she falls passionately in text-love with another outsider, Shane, whose obsession with Edna sends off alarm signals to her world-weary mother, especially when he drives hundreds of miles to show up unannounced at their home. Meanwhile, Joe is coming of age with an Evangelical mother who believes his probable epilepsy means he has been touched by God and uses her religiosity as justification for not seeking medical attention for her son and for remaining with his abusive father. As Joe and Edna reach adulthood struggling to make sense of their lives and losses, their dangerous tracks are set for collision.

Sell Anything on Craigslist! G. Younger,2017-10-29 Jeremy Tucker thought he lived in the most boring town in the world. This town held them in the palm of its hand, and it knew everything about everyone that lived there, the good, the bad, every sin, every secret, and everything was known about each and every resident. This quiet little town was about to change and all because he put an ad on Craigslist. Some would say he was a genius, while others would accuse him of being the Devil himself. Read his story and you decide.

Hung Anne Marsh,2017-08-31 A sexy standalone romantic comedy from New York Times bestselling author Anne Marsh He's big. He's sexy. And he's hung. The first time I meet Pick Revere I tried to bash his head in with a baseball bat. The second time, I kissed the ever-loving daylights out of him on a dare. For a girl who's on the lam and hiding from her cop ex, I'm failing miserably at laying low. Instead, I'm going up in delicious flames--because Pick's the hottest, roughest, toughest bad boy firefighter I've ever laid eyes (or lips) on. He promises he has a big hose--and knows how to use it. I'd investigate, but I need my job as a cook at the fire camp. I'm supposed to serve my hotshot breakfast—not me. I'm supposed to keep my secrets. And I'm definitely supposed to stay single. But I'm not prepared for what happens after our kiss. Pick's magnetic and dangerous. He's short-term fun—not Mr. Commitment. But then he volunteers to be my muscle when my douche ex tracks me down. And I shouldn't want more than that. But I do. I should run as fast as I could from Pick. But I won't. Because he sets me on fire and you know what they say about firefighters—the hotter you get, the faster they come. How's a gal to say no? This is a sexy standalone romantic comedy for fans of Lauren Blakely, Helena Hunting, and dirty, raunchy, hot firefighters. It is the first in a new series.

Life Amplified Karen Skogen Haslem,2015-03-20 If you know one child with autism, you know one child with autism. But not everyone gets that chance. In Life Amplified, Karen Haslem gives readers an honest, intimate, remarkably engaging look at the struggles and triumphs of her oldest son, who has autism. Drawing strength from their faith, the Haslem family strives every day to embrace, not just tolerate, Titus's differences. Written with humor, grace, and a gift for lucid detail, Haslem's memoir captures a sequence of vivid episodes that convey the joy, heartache, pride, and terror of being Titus—or being Titus's mom. Life Amplified will bring new understanding and inspiration to other families touched by autism, as well as anyone seeking insight into their world.

At Home: A Client's Appreciation for Authentic Architecture Deborah Lencioni Lapp,2023-08-16 With more than 100 color photos, author Deborah Lencioni Lapp tells the story of her life in the houses she's called home, and in so doing, demonstrates the importance of architecture in our everyday lives. Having worked closely with renowned architect Arthur Dyson on her first home, the award-winning Lencioni Residence, Lapp returns to Dyson decades later, after the death of her husband, after her children have grown, and after her remarriage, to create a new home—the award-winning Lapp RiverHouse—for the next phase in her and her partner's lives. From the planning stages to soliciting bids from contractors to the challenges and joys of construction, Lapp lays out in specific, eye-opening, and sometimes humorous detail, how a client-architect collaboration can and should work. In an age of cookie-cutter McMansions, Lapp shows us that a nourishing, energizing, and embracing home that reflects your authentic self is not only possible, it makes all the difference. “Deborah Lencioni Lapp weaves together the story of her own life, its sorrows and celebrations, with the story of the houses sheltering and reflecting that life; she gently—but unequivocally—reminds us that authenticity is reflected in all the choices that we make, not the least of which are the houses we build and the steps we take to make those houses ours. If the unexamined life is not worth living, then a thoughtful life will be present in every line, curve, angle, and space in which we move and breathe, a reminder of not only who we are but who we are meant to be.” —David Borofka, author of A Longing for Impossible Things and The End of Good Intentions
