Famous Adventures and Prison Escapes of the Civil War (Classic Reprint) George Washington Cable, 2017-12-26 Excerpt from Famous Adventures and Prison Escapes of the Civil War The following diary was originally written in lead pencil and in a book the leaves of which were too soft to take ink legibly I have it direct from the hands of its writer, a lady whom I have had the honor to know for nearly thirty years for good reasons the author's name is omitted, and the initials of people and the names of places are sometimes fictitiously given Many of the persons mentioned were my own acquaintances and friends When, some twenty years afterwards, she first resolved to publish it, she bought me a clear, complete copy in ink It had cost much trouble, she said, for much of the pencilling had been made under such disadvantages and was so faint that at times she could decipher it only under direct sunlight She had succeeded, however, in making a copy, verbatim except for occasional improvement in the grammatical form of a sentence, then and then. Famous Adventures and Prison Escapes of the Civil War William Pittenger, 2015-05-14 Famous Adventures And Prison Escapes Of The Civil War from William Pittenger. Soldier during the American Civil War and a recipient of the Medal of Honor (1840-1904).

Famous Adventures and Prison Escapes of the Civil War (Classics Collection) CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform, Various, 2013-09-04 As the first scare wore off, however, we found the women and children remaining at home, while the men went to the muster. When a thirsty cavalryman rode up to a house to inquire for buttermilk, he was generally met by a buxom dame, with a half-dozen or more small children peeping out from her voluminous skirts, who, in response to a question about the old man, would say: The men hev all gone to the 'rally'; you'll see 'em soon. We experienced little difficulty in procuring food for man and horse. Usually upon our raids it was much easier to obtain meat than bread. But in Indiana and Ohio we always found bread ready baked at every house. In Ohio, on more than one occasion, in deserted houses we found pies, hot from the oven, displayed upon tables conveniently spread. The first time that I witnessed this sort of hospitality was when I rode up to a house where a party of my men were standing around a table garnished as I have described, eyeing the pies hungrily, but showing no disposition to touch them. I asked, in astonishment, why they were so abstinent. One of them replied that they feared the pies might be poisoned. I was quite sure, on the contrary, that they were intended as a propitiatory offering. I have always been fond of pies,—these were of luscious apples,—so I made the spokesman hand me one of the largest, and proceeded to eat it. The men watched me vigilantly for two or three minutes, and then, as I seemed much better after my repast, they took hold ravenously. The severe marching made an exchange of horses a necessity, though as a rule the horses we took were very inferior to the Kentucky and Tennessee stock we had brought with us, and which had generally a large infusion of thoroughbred blood. The horses we impressed were for the most part heavy, sluggish beasts, barefooted and grass-fed, and gave out after a day or two, sometimes in a few hours. A strong provost guard, under Major Steele of the 3d Kentucky, had been organized to prevent the two practices most prejudicial to discipline and efficiency—straggling and pillage. There were very good reasons, independent of the provost guard, why the men should not straggle far from the line of march; but the well-filled stores and gaudy shop-windows of the Indiana and Ohio towns seemed to stimulate, in men accustomed to impoverished and unpretentious Dixie, the propensity to appropriate beyond limit or restraint. I had never before seen anything like this disposition to plunder. Our perilous situation only seemed to render the men more reckless. At the same time, anything more ludicrous than the manner in which they indulged their predatory tastes can scarcely be imagined. The weather was intensely warm,—the hot July sun burned the earth to powder, and we were breathing superheated dust,—yet one man rode for three days with seven pairs of skates slung about his neck; another loaded himself with sleigh-bells. A large chafing-dish, a medium-sized Dutch clock, a green glass decanter with goblets to match, a bag of horn buttons, a chandelier, and a bird-cage containing three canaries were some of the articles I saw borne off and jealously fondled. The officers usually waited a reasonable period, until the novelty had worn off, and then had this rubbish thrown away. Baby shoes and calico, however, were the staple articles of appropriation. A fellow would procure a bolt of calico, carry it carefully for a day or two, then cast it aside and get another.
