The West Limerick Man Who Wrote a Dictionary: T. O'Neill Lane Seaghan Mac an tSionnaigh,2015 Four Irish dictionaries were published in the years of the 20th century leading up to the foundation of the Irish Free State, and half of them were published by a remarkable and remarkably talented man known as T. O'Neill Lane of Templeglantine West (1852-1915), one of the most intriguing figures from a Gaelic Revival period which engendered its fair share of eccentrics. The second of his dictionaries, Lane's Larger English-Irish Dictionary / Foclóir Béarla-Gaedhilge (1916), was the first major English-Irish dictionary published in the 20th century. He died the day after he saw it materialise before him. And then he was forgotten, and for no good reason. This book relates the entire story, looking at his family life, career, and legacy. Also included is a glossary of West Limerick Irish compiled from the various clues interspersed throughout O'Neill Lane's ever informative dictionary entries;

a rare insight into the spoken Irish of a county for which little other sources exist.

Focalóir Gaoidhilge-sags-bhéarla, Or An Irish-English Dictionary John O'Brien,1832

An Irish-English Dictionary John O'Brien,2018-02-10 Excerpt from An Irish-English Dictionary: Whereof the Irish Part Hath Been Compiled Not Only From Various Irish Vocabularies, Particularly That of Mr. Edward Lhuyd, but Also From a Great Variety of the Best Irish Manuscripts Now Extant That there may be many imperfections in the execution of this work I think not improbable, considering the circumstances under which it has been undertaken that in spite of all its imperfections it will be found an effective assistant in the study of Irish literature I have no doubt; that it will be particularly useful to the student of the Irish Bible I am fully persuaded. I ardently desire the intellectual and spiritual culture of the natives of my country, my kinsmen according to the flesh, who speak the Irish language. I see no reason why they should not have their language cultivated as well as the Scotch and the Welch. I anticipate national and individual improvement from the education of the people of Ireland through the medium of their own language.
