One House Per Day No. 001-365 Andrew Bruno,2022-12-15 One House Per Day no.001-365 collects the first 365 drawings from Andrew Bruno's project One House Per Day, along with a foreword by Keith Krumwiede and essay contributions by Malcolm Rio, Alessandro Orsini & Nick Roseboro, and Clark Thenhaus. The drawings are high quality 1:1 reproductions of the originals, and the 7.5 trim size matches the size of the sketchbooks that the originals were drawn in. The drawings are each given a full page, with a subsequent section including a brief description of each drawing. While the drawings themselves are mute, and their descriptions relatively deadpan, the essays contemplate the place of the detached house in American culture from social, political, and economic perspectives. The book is 392 pages long and is softbound in gray recycled paper. The front cover features 365 debossed circles to represent the 365 houses; these give the book a unique tactile quality.

A Day in the World SBS Staff,2012 On 15 May 2012, Aday.org aims to create the most comprehensive photographic documentation of daily life ever made. During one single day, people in every country of the world will pick up their cameras to picture their daily life. Hundreds of thousands of photographers are expected to take part and share their perspectives. The mission is to offer different perspectives, all aiming to spark reflections on humankind, today and tomorrow. In this spirit, the project is inclusive; both pro-photographers and amateurs are invited to take part and the aim is to cover every country in the world. Everyday Jay Desind,2015-05-01 Now in paperback! Over 370 pages of black and white photographyAn Amazing Journey Through Photography and the Written WordFrom the introduction to Everyday... This book is my Peter Pan moment of infinite discovery. I want each page of everyday to be viewed as a visual poem; sometimes the pages may feel crowded, other times, sparse. Everyday is a concise photo layout of that particular day in time, complete with inspirational or thought provoking words, and is the original creation of Jay Desind, poet, photographer and bestselling author of the memoir, Lost in Language. The photography was all created with the iPhone and edited on the iPhone. Join Jay as he travels across two continents and through various countries. A Facebook favorite, Jay shares his intimate journey of photography in a unique almanac that reads like a photo essay.Q&A With Jay DesindQ.What led to the creation of Everday? A. Everyday came about as a very organic process. For the last several years I have been fortunate to travel to many places in the world. I love sharing my photos on social media, but I wanted to create something that more mirrored my journey. I didn't want Everyday to be a travelogue-he went here, here, here. I wanted it to more intimate and more a reflection of the reasons why one holds up a camera and takes a picture. That's why the accompanying text is a very integral piece of this journey.Q.Is all the writing in Everyday your own? A. Yes, for the most part it is. In the very beginning of this journey, I began to use the iPhone as my main camera. I liked the immediacy of it. I also discovered it was a great way to take notes on the places I went to, and in short order I began to express the feelings of these places-and my own-through poetry. The iPhone made it easy. If you ever see me walking down the street tapping away into my phone, it's a pretty good chance I have just taken a picture and am writing a poem about it! There are some days in Everyday that a photo of mine brought for me a different experience and led me to accompany it with a quote from somewhere else, or in some cases song lyrics.Q.What places did you travel to that Everyday covers? A. Everyday is all 365 days of 2013. I present it in almanac form, so we start that year in Barcelona, Spain and end in Bilbao, Spain. Spain has become a favorite place of me and Roberto to spend the first of the year at! Sandwiched in between are visits back to the United States-California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Arizona, and New York City. A great deal of the book takes place in Italy, with a couple side trips to Norway and Denmark. There are a few instances where a photo layout is from the previous year, 2012. My intent was to share photos taken on the specific calendar day of my journey, so it was necessary to delve back to a different year to share what I thought was an appropriate photo and story.Q. How would you describe Everyday in an elevator? A. Oh, boy. Will, I would say first, 'Run for your lives!' But being in a elevator it would be more appropriate to say, 'Stop pushing all the buttons, you're not going to escape any sooner!' I guess I would say that Everyday is not a typical 365 day journal or almanac of photos filled with inspirational quotes and recipes for brownies. Everyday has very few photos that are sweeping vistas of foreign places. Rather, it is a map of myself and an honest intimate expression of how my travels affected me in that time. I think of it as a visual memoir. I've peopled it with captures of strangers, but in a way these brief encounters felt more like chance discoveries of new friends. I want readers to linger over the pages and not view Everyday as a whole. . Above all, I want people to see themselves in some of these pages and I want them to learn things like I've learned though my travels

The resulting images create an intimate document of the everydaydomestic scenes, nature, children, and meditative still lifesuniversal in their simplicity and appeal. 365 photos capture the minutiae of life as it is actually experienced to create a narrative attuned to detail, place, and the passage of time. Everyday demonstrates how serious creative work can stem from the most ordinary settings, and how surprisingly often mundane detail and unexpected beauty turn out to be one in the same.

ChicagoDAILY Wendy Fischer Hartman,2023-06 A visual diary of Chicago life. Chicago is the city of real people. People who aren't on billboards. People as beautiful and striking as Chicago's architecture. Chicago is business and purpose, love and loneliness, beauty and disorder. Forty years ago, I started taking photographs for a college project; a photo book titled Faces of Chicago. I didn't know then that it was called street photography. Fast forward to March 2020 when Chicagoans sheltered in place during the early stages of the Covid-19 pandemic. I took a camera to the empty streets and starteddocumenting the city during this very strange time. Chicago, A Daily Diary began. ChicagoDAILY is year 2022 from that ongoing project. In March 2020, I began posting ten photos every day, to document the extraordinary people and architecture of Chicago. ChicagoDAILY is one photo a day from this visual diary. One year of living images from one of the greatest cities in the world. I stand in the shadow of Vivian Maier, Art Shay and others who have photographed the soul of Chicago. ChicagoDAILY is a passion, a tribute and a continuation. Sweet Home, Chicago. My city. My muse. My happy place.

Attention Equals Life Andrew Epstein,2016-06-10 Poetry has long been thought of as a genre devoted to grand subjects, timeless themes, and sublime beauty. Why, then, have contemporary poets turned with such intensity to documenting and capturing the everyday and mundane? Drawing on insights about the nature of everyday life from philosophy, history, and critical theory, Andrew Epstein traces the modern history of this preoccupation and considers why it is so much with us today. Attention Equals Life argues that a potent hunger for everyday life explodes in the post-1945 period as a reaction to the rapid, unsettling transformations of this epoch, which have resulted in a culture of perilous distraction. Epstein demonstrates that poetry is an important, and perhaps unlikely, cultural form that has mounted a response, and even a mode of resistance, to a culture suffering from an acute crisis of attention. In this timely and engaging study, Epstein examines why a compulsion to represent the everyday becomes predominant in the decades after modernism and why it has so often sparked genre-bending formal experimentation. With chapters devoted to illuminating readings of a diverse group of writers--including poets associated with influential movements like the New York School, language poetry, and conceptual writing--the book considers the variety of forms contemporary poetry of everyday life has taken, and analyzes how gender, race, and political forces all profoundly inflect the experience and the representation of the quotidian. By exploring the rise of experimental realism as a poetic mode and the turn to rule-governed everyday-life projects, Attention Equals Life offers a new way of understanding a vital strain at the heart of twentieth- and twenty-first century literature. It not only charts the evolution of a significant concept in cultural theory and poetry, but also reminds readers that the quest to pay attention to the everyday within today's frenetic world of smartphones and social media is an urgent and unending task.
