Reclaiming the Game William G. Bowen,Sarah A. Levin,2011-06-27 In Reclaiming the Game, William Bowen and Sarah Levin disentangle the admissions and academic experiences of recruited athletes, walk-on athletes, and other students. In a field overwhelmed by reliance on anecdotes, the factual findings are striking--and sobering. Anyone seriously concerned about higher education will find it hard to wish away the evidence that athletic recruitment is problematic even at those schools that do not offer athletic scholarships. Thanks to an expansion of the College and Beyond database that resulted in the highly influential studies The Shape of the River and The Game of Life, the authors are able to analyze in great detail the backgrounds, academic qualifications, and college outcomes of athletes and their classmates at thirty-three academically selective colleges and universities that do not offer athletic scholarships. They show that recruited athletes at these schools are as much as four times more likely to gain admission than are other applicants with similar academic credentials. The data also demonstrate that the typical recruit is substantially more likely to end up in the bottom third of the college class than is either the typical walk-on or the student who does not play college sports. Even more troubling is the dramatic evidence that recruited athletes underperform: they do even less well academically than predicted by their test scores and high school grades. Over the last four decades, the athletic-academic divide on elite campuses has widened substantially. This book examines the forces that have been driving this process and presents concrete proposals for reform. At its core, Reclaiming the Game is an argument for re-establishing athletics as a means of fulfilling--instead of undermining--the educational missions of our colleges and universities.

Beyond C. L. R. James John Nauright,Alan G. Goble,David K. Wiggins,2014-11-01 Beyond C. L. R. James brings together essays analyzing the interconnections among race, ethnicity, and sport. Published in memory of C. L. R. James, the revolutionary sociologist and writer from Trinidad who penned the famous autobiographical account of cricket titled Beyond a Boundary, this collection of essays, many of which originated at the 2010 conference on race and ethnicity in sport at the University of West Indies, Cave Hill in Barbados, cover everything from Aborigines in sport and cricket and minstrel shows in Australia to Zulu stick fighting and football and racism in northern Ireland. The essays, divided into four sections that include introductory comments by each editor, are written by some of the more well-known sport historians in the world and characterized by a focus on the role of culture and sport in society in the context of both political economies and the state as well as colonial and postcolonial struggles. Included also are discussions on how sport at once brings people together, shapes the identities of its participants, and reflects the continuing search for social justice.

Woven throughout these themes are public relations theories applied in sport-specific contexts to help students further understand the complexity of the sport communication ecosystem. Throughout the book, there is guidance for practical application, including samples of public relations materials such as news releases and employee newsletters. Be Your Own Media sidebars highlight how sport organizations are proactively telling their stories across various media platforms. New to this edition, case studies and discussion questions serve as a foundation for additional learning. Other updates include the following: Discussion of engaging key publics through social media and other forms of digital media—such as blogs, podcasts, virtual fan communities, and video—as well as approaches to developing content, metrics for measuring success, and skills for managing media in sport An examination of customer experience (CX) and how to enhance those relationships by defining customer touch points and mapping the customer journey Considerations for social media usage during crisis communication, with modern examples of effective and ineffective ways prominent sport entities have managed recent crises Also new to the third edition are related online learning aids delivered through HKPropel and designed to generate discussion and highlight the opportunities and challenges that exist in sport public relations. Commentary on current topics is accompanied by links to associated content, discussion questions, and applied learning activities to promote engaged student learning. A live Twitter feed for specific hashtags within HKPropel ensures regular updates. G-Man For All Seasons Andrew Poncho Glover, 2024-02-14 This is a beautiful love story. Not a boy meets girl lives happily ever after tale, but a deep dive into the genuine love for the sports. All sports. This idea of deep love for the game is not unique, as there are countless astonishingly talented professional players, players at all levels, collegiate, high school, little league and even the neighborhood sandlot player, who adores sports as well. However, Andrew Poncho Glover's story is unique in how the love for sports began and how the zeal for football was cultivated. The obstacles he encountered as a small framed black kid from Louisiana to the strong man that earned his way to a 10-year career in the NFL, is remarkable. Ascension at its highest level. The story will follow his life as he transitions from early childhood to high school athletics, to earning a scholarship to attend Grambling State University. Building the right relationship is pivotal to the person he became, meeting Eddie G. Robinson, Sr, a coach/mentor at Grambling State, Mr. Bubber, a local businessman in his hometown, his Godfather and several more men. These men were pivotal during the different stages of his life. When Poncho finally locked in, he exceeded everyone's expectations of him in the classroom, on the football and track field and basketball courts. He worked diligently and bet on himself, the rebellious Poncho. This dedication allowed him to win championships in three different sports all in the same school year. He was coined The Man For All Seasons, at Grambling State. Andrew Poncho Glover is undoubtedly a generational talent.
