First Explorers Karin Cox, New Holland Publishers, 2018-01-08

Imagine stumbling across a forgotten continent, a place like nowhere else on Earth, a place inhabited by strange hopping mammals, venomous snakes and Aborigines who hurl spears at your approach. You made it across vast, treacherous oceans and now that you've discovered the fabled Great Southern Land, you record its riches before you risk the long journey home. The life of an explorer was an adventure, as men battled thirst, starvation, disease, flies and mosquitoes in their quest to add their names to the history books. In First Explorers, learn about the first Europeans to map the coastline of Australia, as well as the more glamorous explorers who headed into the continent's rugged, mysterious interior. Includes a timeline, quiz, activities, glossary and index.

Putting Queensland on the Map Felicity Jack, 2008 Robert Logan Jack, a geologist and explorer who played an important role in the early development of Queensland's mining industry. His extensive letters and diaries provide the basis for the book.-- Provided by publisher.

The Last Explorer Simon Nasht, 2007 Hubert Wilkins was truly the last - and one of the greatest - explorers. And much more than that. Born in South Australia, he spent much of his life outside the country - but always remained an Australian. He travelled through every continent and was a pioneer of aviation. He survived crashes and disasters, firing squads and sabotage, living long enough to be honoured by kings, presidents and dictators. He was a frontline photographer in World War I - and was twice decorated. He took the first ever film of battle and took the first moving images from an aircraft. He was the first man to fly across the Arctic Ocean, the first to fly in the Antarctic - and the first to fly from America to Europe across the then unknown Arctic (the New York Times called this 'the greatest flight in history'). In the 1930s he spent several years travelling in western Queensland and the Northern Territory - where many of his observations and views were ahead of their time. In the later years of his life he did work for the US military and intelligence - and in 1958 was buried at sea at the North Pole by the US Navy.

James Cook Susan Meyer,2016-12-15 In the 18th century the explorer and mariner James Cook made his way to the American colonies to fight for the British in the French and Indian War. In the New World he would earn fame as a courageous sea captain, talented mapmaker, astronomer of Venus, and seeker of the Northwest Passage. This fascinating account details his voyage around Antarctica and his accomplishment as the first accurate mapmaker of the Pacific Ocean. This guide will introduce readers to the legacy of one of the most talented men in the history of exploration.

Christie Palmerston, Explorer of the Rainforest Paul Savage,1992

Samuel H. Moreton Fraser H. Moreton,2004-01-01 Sam Moreton became involved in the development of tourism in Fiordland and was almost certainly the one who discovered the McKinnon Pass in 1882. He was a partner with Donald Sutherland at Milford. Sam's wife, Rosa Clara, was the first white woman to walk what is now known as the Milford Track. Sam came to New Zealand in 1863 and settled in Invercargill. He had training in art as part of his early education and became entranced with the scenery in Fiordland, the Sounds and their environs. He tramped, climbed and sketched, returning to his studio to paint the scenery. His artistic achievements were matched by his ability as a climber and explorer. His paintings and sketches are renowned for their accuracy and are still consulted by those who wish to track the changes in topography over the last century or so. His story is an integral part of the early history of settlement and the development of tourism in the South Island or, as he called it, the 'Middle Island' of New Zealand. His output was considerable and much of it is preserved in the archives of the Turnbull Library in Wellington.

The Last Explorer Simon Nasht,2011-04-18 The incredible story of the first truly modern explorer, whose death-defying adventures and uncommon modesty make this book itself an extraordinary discovery.

The EXPLORERS of AUSTRALIA and THEIR LIFE-WORK (Annotated) Ernest FAVENC,2021-11-17 In introducing this book, I should like to commend it to its readers as giving an account of the explorers of Australia in a simple and concise form not hitherto available. It introduces them to us, tells the tale of their long-trying patience and stubborn endurance, how they lived and did their work, and gives a short but graphic outline of the work they accomplished in opening out and preparing Australia as another home for our race on this side of the world.
