Tobacco Use in Shisha World Health Organization. Regional Office for the Eastern Mediterranean, 2006 The rules and regulations stipulated by the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control apply to all tobacco products. This will therefore include tobacco consumed through use of the water pipe, or shisha, a traditional form of smoking common to the WHO Eastern Mediterranean Region. The regulation of tobacco products includes health warnings, information about contents and emissions, as well as packaging and labeling. This publication comprises a series of studies conducted by the Egyptian Smoking Prevention Research Institute (ESPRI). For decades use of the water pipe, or shisha, was considered to be less harmful than cigarette consumption; worse, in the eyes of many users it is not even considered to be a form of tobacco smoking. Traditionally the water pipe has been regarded as less harmful and less addictive than cigarettes. These studies show the reality behind this false premise. The water pipe is as harmful and as addictive as cigarettes. The WHO Regional Office for the Eastern Mediterranean hopes, through the publication of these studies, to convey the message to decision-makers, health professionals and the public in the Region that use of the water pipe is indeed harmful. It is just another of the many disguised forms of tobacco consumption and not a safe alternative to cigarettes.

Doing Excellent Social Research with Documents Aimee Grant, 2018-09-03 In today's society we increasingly create and consume written content and images. This includes a range of sources, from social media posts to records held within organisations, and everything in between, including news articles, blogs, shopping lists and official government documents. Critically reading these 'documents' can help us to understand a huge amount about society. Doing Excellent Social Research with Documents includes guidance on how to 'read between the lines', and provides an overview of six research projects which use documents as data. The substantive chapters are organised in two sections, with each chapter focused on a specific type of data. Section one focuses on documents that are found in isolation from their authors, including official and historical documents, traditional media, diaries and online content. Section two focuses on using documents in addition to existing data from primary research, including the role of documents in ethnography and visual research methods. In each chapter, you will be guided through the process of: Developing research questions, and how this impacts on which documents are selected; Considering aspects of bias and quality within the documentary sources; Undertaking analysis using six different strategies including thematic analysis, framework analysis, content analysis, discourse analysis and narrative analysis. Drawing on research projects which reflect real world situations, you will be methodically guided through the research process in detail, enabling you to examine and understand the practices and value of a range of documentary analysis approaches. Doing Excellent Social Research with Documents is a practical how-to guide for students (final year undergraduates onwards) and researchers using documents as data.

Over the Hookah George Frank Lydston,2018-03-06 Excerpt from Over the Hookah: The Tales of a Talkative Doctor I am getting more than my share Of anything in literature; and if there is anything more essential to literature than criticism, and plenty of it, I don't know what it is unless it be ink. So wade in, mes am'l's, and spare not the lash! I can't laugh at my own work, even the funny parts; a parent never sees anything ridiculous in his own Offspring - which is Why humorists are so grave - but I promise you that the whip and spur of the critic will tickle me 'most to death. And if he should say pleasant things - why, the hookah shall be loaded with myrrh and frankincense, and there shall be joy in the fullness thereof in mine household! A doctor ought never to write such a book, eh? You are wasting breath, my kind friend. That's just Why I wrote it! I have plenty of excellent company; I know a number of good christians who confess several times daily that they have done those things they ought not to have done and left undone those things they ought to have done - and then their digestions work right merrily, while Morpheus treats them passing well. Now, I am of Opinion that the presentation of the things [ought not to have done, may be quite as beneficial to my digestion as would the confession of them. As for the things I have left undone - come, mine excellent critic, send me a list of them, and you'll find them done right brown in the next edition! Pray, look out, sir, lest you get some of the hot gravy on your own intellectual fingers! About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
