The Laughing Mill and Other Stories (Persian Edition) Julian Hawthorne, 2015-07-12 Excerpt from The Laughing Mill and Other Stories What is called the human interest in fiction is doubtless more absorbing than any other, but other legitimate sources of interest exist. The marvellous always possesses a fascination, and justly; for while it is neither human nature nor fact, it ministers to an aesthetic appetite of the mind which neither fact nor human nature can gratify. Superstition has been well abused; but that were a sad day which should behold the destruction in us of the quality which keeps superstition alive. Fortunately that day can never come - least of all under a Positivist administration. Such works as The Tempest, Faust, and Consuelo show their authors at their best, because, being obliged by the subject to soar above the level of vulgar possibility, the writers catch a gleam of transcendent sunlight on their wings. The Laughing Mill, and Other Stories Julian Hawthorne, 2018-05-24 One of the tales, it should be added, is a mere jeu d'esprit, the presence of which in the collection is justifiable only on the plea that it makes believe to be what the others are—relieving a note too monotonously sounded by lowering it to the key of mockery. Possibly, nevertheless, it may turn out to be the float which will save the weightier portion of the cargo from going too speedily to the bottom. All the stories have appeared, during the last four years, in various periodicals, to the editors of which my acknowledgments are due for leave to reproduce them.

The Laughing Mill Julian Hawthorne, 2018-05-24 The Laughing Mill By Julian Hawthorne It was after dinner—after one of Tom Gainsborough's snug, inimitable little dinners; only we three—Tom, his wife, and myself: and a couple of negro attendants, as well trained and less overpowering than the best of the native English stock; and that charming dining-room, just big enough, just cool enough, soft-carpeted, clear-walled, and the steady white radiance of the argand burners descending upon the damask tablecloth, crowned with fruits and flowers; and an agreeable shadow over the rest of the room, so that those sable servitors could perform their noiseless178 evolutions unseen; and a pervading sense of unconscious good-breeding and unobtrusive wealth; and—but I will not speak of the china; I will not descant upon Tom's wines; I don't wish to make other people envious. ...But the boat turned out to be so crowded that I changed my mind again: it was then so late that I hadn't time to reach the central railway station; my only chance of catching the train was to jump into a droschkey at the steamboat landing and drive as the kutcher never drove before, for the lower station, which was half-a-mile nearer.
